

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

INTRODUCTION

For the present work it was originally intended to examine all the printed annotated editions of Catullus up to 1850. The object was twofold: first, to settle definitely whether the former editors and commentators of Catullus had access to any MSS which have since been lost, and if so, whether these MSS were of any value for the text of our author, and second, to furnish a criterion for testing the judgment, critical sense and accuracy of the scholars who have edited Latin authors since the beginning of printing. The latter is of far greater importance than the former. For example, if it can be shown that the MSS of Catullus cited by a certain scholar as old and valuable are both late and worthless as well as inaccurately quoted, serious doubts will be cast upon that scholar's reports for other authors. A case in point is that of Scaliger. His "valuable" MS of Propertius, Catullus and Tibullus has been identified by Palmer and Ellis<sup>1</sup> as a MS now in the possession of Mr. Samuel Allen. Palmer, prejudiced by his discovery, thought the MS of great value, and used it in his edition of Propertius. Ellis did not consider the Catullus of much value. The MS was written in 1467 by Pacificus Maximus de Asculo "in sapientia veteri Perusiae"—apparently, then, by a professor in the University of Perugia. The same man thoroughly corrected and annotated the whole MS. The result of his work is valuable only in the way that Scaliger's printed text is valuable, not for the old readings it retains, but for the new ones it suggests, and even then its value is as much less than Scaliger's text as Maximus' scholarship is less than Scaliger's. It is not that kind of MS which we want for our critical apparatus. Palmer and Ellis, moreover, point out many errors in Scaliger's reports, some of which no doubt are printer's errors. If we bear all this in mind, we shall be very cautious about accepting Scaliger's statements about other MSS—the most important of which is his "fragmentum peroptimum" of Tibullus.

In the same way, we should be careful about accepting the statements of other early editors about old and valuable MSS. In the case of too many authors are we still dependent on the reports of early editors.

To do properly a piece of work of the sort proposed, it is necessary to have at hand all the MSS of the author known to exist, or, failing this impossible ideal, complete collations or copies of these MSS. For Catullus, such a collection of material exists in Professor W. G. Hale's apparatus,<sup>1</sup> the use of which I have had.

It was seen that if the original plan were adhered to, the result would exceed the limits that various considerations set upon this dissertation. I have, therefore, selected one editor only for cross-examination. The reasons for choosing Statius are, that he is an early editor, that he frequently cites MS readings, that his work gives the impression of being more accurate than that of other editors of his century or even later, and that he occupies a commanding position in the textual criticism of Catullus. It is hoped that the work can at some future time be completed and published, according to the original plan.

I am indebted to Professor W. G. Hale for the use of his collations of Catullus MSS and of his notes on and photographs of R, as well as for permission to publish readings from this material. I wish to express my thanks to Dr. C. H. Beeson for reading and criticizing the proof-sheets.

THE IDENTIFICATION OF STATIUS' MANUSCRIPTS

Achilles Statius (Estaço), a Portuguese, after studying in Evora, Löwen, Paris and Padua, went to Rome and became librarian to Cardinal Sforza, and afterward secretary to Pope Pius V<sup>1</sup>. In 1566 he published an annotated edition of Catullus from the Aldine press. In his commentary he cites MS readings frequently. Usually he does not name the MSS, but contents himself with such general statements as in MSS omnibus, in uno MS, etc.

The following are the MSS he calls by name:

1. Patavinus (on 44.17 etc.)
2. Patavinus alter (on 1.1 etc.)
(uterque Patavinus on 45.14)
3. Maffei liber (on 2.6 etc.)
4. Meus (on 15.11 etc.)
5. Vaticanus (on 64.36-7)
6. Marcelli Pont. Maximi liber (on 66.7)
7. Zanchi liber (on 104.4 etc.)

Sillig<sup>2</sup> compiled a longer list, as follows:

- a. Patavinus
- b. Patavinus secundus
- c. Maffeianus
- d. Maffeianus II (quum ad XXIII.12.duos hoc nomine appellet.)
- e. Maffeianus III (Tres scilicet Maffeianos libros citat ad LXVI.54, LXVII.31)
- f. Marcelli Pontificis Maximi liber
- g. Zanchi exemplar
- h. suus

It will be seen that Sillig overlooked the Vaticanus. His inclusion of three Maffeiiani was due to a misinterpretation of Statius' Latin. In a note to 23.12 Statius says: In duobus libris, Maffei scilicet, ac meo legebatur, Aut qui. Statius of course does not mean that he consulted two MSS of Maffei's, but one of Maffei's and one of his own—two altogether. On 66.54, Statius has the note: In MSS sic erat, in primo Maffei, Optulit — — —. In secundo, Optulit — — —. In tertio, Optulit — — —. The meaning of in primo Maffei is "in the first MS (i. e. that of Maffei)." In secundo and in tertio are not to be taken as other MSS of Maffei. On 67.31 Sillig made the same mistake. Statius says: In Maffei libro erat — — —. in alio — — —. in tertio — — —. The interpretation is the same as in the preceding case: in alio and in tertio do not mean "in another" and "in a third MS of Maffei's," but "in another" and "in a third MS" (not Maffei's). Nowhere does he, for example, say, in Maffei altero libro, whereas he does use the phrase in Patauino altero.<sup>1</sup>

In identifying the MSS he used I begin with the easiest.

The Vaticanus is mentioned in only one passage, on 64.36-7:

Cum in MSS omnibus legatur, Grauinonisque domos:
et in Vaticano, Granionisque domos — — —. Quod sequitur, Ac moenia Larissea uarie legitur in MSS. primum sic, Ac nitens Alacrisa. deinde sic, Ac nitentis alacrissea.
deinde etiam sic, Ac nitenis alacrissaea. in Vaticano autem sic, ac Nycenis alarissa.

These sufficiently peculiar readings of the Vaticanus are exactly the readings of Vaticanus 1608. This is a parchment MS containing Catullus and Vergil's Priapea. On the first page are found the arms of the della Rovere family surmounted by the papal insignia, which must refer to Pope Sixtus IV. It is therefore the MS mentioned in the inventory account-book of Sixtus IV in these terms<sup>2</sup>.

Satisfeci scriptori qui scripsit Catullum poetam et Priapeiam Virgilii simul in bonis litteris ducatis tribus, die ultima maii 1479.

From this it appears that the MS has been in the Vatican Library since it was written. In an inventory of the Vatican Library made under Paul III about 1550<sup>1</sup>, occurs this item:

X<sup>o</sup> 811 Valerii Catuli epigrammata
Item Virgilij, Priapea.
ex mem. in rub<sup>o</sup>.

In the catalogue which forms the mate to this inventory<sup>2</sup>, the following item is found:

in bib<sup>ca</sup> magna pu<sup>ca</sup>
n.6 Catullus ex mê in rub. in fi. l. p. malum (=in fine primae paginae, malum).

These descriptions fit Vatic. 1608 and it only. It has malum (2.12) at the end of the first page.

In a note to 66.7, Statius has the following: numine] Sic etiam erat in MSS ijs, quos habebam. In Marcelli Pont. Maximi libro fuerat, Munere. Marcellus II (Cervinus) was pope for 21 days in 1555. He was the founder of the collection which afterwards became the nucleus of the Ottoboni library of the Vatican. It is in this library that we must look for his MS of Catullus. When he died, the collection first went to Cardinal Sirleto. In a catalogue prepared shortly after Sirleto's death (1585) appears this notice:<sup>3</sup>

In foglio in Papiro
112 Catullus. et propertij Elegia.

No other MS of Catullus is given in this catalogue. The only one of the four Ottoboni MSS (1550, 1799, 1829, 1982) which fits this description is 1550, a paper MS measuring 281 by 218 mm. and containing Catullus, Propertius and an elegy of Panormita. Heyse<sup>4</sup> calls this MS "ehedem Marcelli Pontificis liber." If Marcellus II had a MS of Catullus (and Statius says he had one), it was almost surely this MS. In 66.7, however, it has numine, not munere as Statius reports. The report is easily explained, for

the MS has the word in this form: umê, which could easily be mistaken for an abbreviation of munere instead of numine. This is the only reference made by Statius to Marcelli liber.

For reasons that will appear later, I give the citations of Patauinus and Patauinus alter together.

- 1.1 Cui] in duobus MSS, CVI, ut est etiam impressum. in uno QVOI. in Patauino altero QVIN.
- 44.17 meum quod non es ulta peccatum] sic etiam in MSS omnibus praeter quam in Patauino, in quo sic erat, Quae non es ulta peccatum.
- 45.8-9 sinistra, ut ante Dextra, sternuit adprobatione] In Patauino altero, Sinistram ut ante Dextram sternuit adprobationem.
- 45.14 uni] In utroque Patauino, Vno. more ueterum.
- 49.6 Tanto pessimus omnium poeta] Hic uersus in Patauino altero non erat.
- 50.3 delicatos] In Patauino altero, Dedicatos.
- 63.37 labantes] In Maffei libro, ac Patauino, Labante.
- 63.45 Simul ipsa pectore Attis sua facta recoluit] In MSS omnibus Ipse. atque in Patauino pro Recoluit, Reuoluit.
- 63.49 Patriam adlocuta est ita uoce maesta miseriter] In MSS omnibus quibus utebar, erat, Patriam adlocuta est ita uoce miseritus maiestas. nisi quod in Patauino pro, Miseritus, Misertus.
- 63.81 tua uerbera patere] ita omnino esse debet, itaque est in Maffei libro, et Patauino, nisi quod Veruuera pro Verbera uitiose.
- 83.3 Mule] Quibusdam in libris, Mulle, per duo LL. In Patauino exemplo, Nulle.
- 101.4 mutum] In Achillis Maffei libro, alteroque Patauino, Mutam.
- 103.3 Aut, si te nummi] In Patauino, At, si te nummi. In nonnullis etiam libris, pro, Nummi, Nimium.
- 104.4 cum caupone] In MSS, Cum tappone, itaque est in Maffei libro. Cum tapone, ut in Zanchi exemplo. In tripone, ut erat in Patauino.
- 107.1 Si quidquam — — — obtigit] In MSS. Si quidquid. in Patauino, pro Obtigit, Obtulit.
- 108.5 gutture] In Patauino, pro Guttare, Gurgite legebatur.

The last two of these readings are very peculiar, and are in themselves sufficient to identify the MS to which they are ascribed<sup>1</sup>. They are found only in a MS that is still in Padua, MS C.77 of the Biblioteca Capitolare. Going through the above list, I find that this MS agrees with the cited readings in 44.17, 45.14, 49.6, 50.3, 63.37, 63.49, 83.3 (a peculiar reading), 101.4, 107.1, 108.5, that is, in seven out of eleven cases with the Patauinus, and in four out of six cases with the Patauinus alter. The four cases of lack of agreement with the Patauinus can be explained in two ways: (1) the reports are incorrect (e. g. in 63.81 Veruenera is surely a printer's error for Verumuera which all the MSS have; in 103.3 where Statius reports At si te nummi as the reading of the Patauinus, he is thinking only of the word At, which the Paduan MS has, as against Aut of the rest, so that his report of Nummi for the Patauinus can not be trusted); (2) Statius is not constant in his differentiation of Patauinus and Patauinus alter<sup>2</sup>. The same explanation may hold for the four cases of agreement of the existing Paduan MS with the readings cited from the Patauinus alter. But another explanation is far more simple. The readings where the existing MS agrees with the Patauinus alter are all readings which are fairly common in other MSS: 45.14, 49.6, 50.3, 101.4. On the other hand, the only two striking readings of the Patauinus alter, in 1.1 and 45.8-9, are not found in the Paduan MS or in any other MS known to me. The Patauinus alter seems, then, to have disappeared since Statius' day. What the nature of this MS was, is a problem that will be taken up later.

Zanchi liber is cited on 104.4, Cum tapone, ut in Zanchi exemplo; 115.2 In Zanchi libro erat, Extera sunt maria; 115.4, Modo, ut in Zanchi. The Catullus MS Vat. lat. 7044 is a sixteenth century MS, on the fly-leaf of which are found these notes:

Catullus Petrei S.....Bergomatis ex antiquissimo exemplari Jouiani Politiani diligentissime descriptus
M.D.XX Kal. Mart.

This is in a brown gray ink; a light gray ink crossed out the name

after Petrei and wrote above Sanchi; then a dark gray ink drew wavy deleting lines through everything except the date; finally a brown ink wrote below:

Ego Laurentius Gambara Brixianus fidem facio librum hunc scriptum esse manu Basilij Zanchi Bergomatis cuius consuetudine et amicitia usus sum per multos annos 1581<sup>1</sup>.

This MS, however, is not the one which Statius used, for it has caupone in 104.4, cetera in 115.2, bona in 115.4. Still it is probable that the same Zanchi owned the MS which Statius consulted. He was a poet and scholar, especially interested in Catullus, an index of whose poems he made<sup>2</sup>. It is possible that his brother Dionysius<sup>3</sup> owned the MS, for in the Bodleian Library at Oxford is a MS (Canon. lat. 126) containing, among other things, a fragmentary Tibullus which belonged to him. It is not impossible that the Catullus which Statius used was once a part of the Bodleian MS. No existing MS can be identified as the one that he cites. Basilio Zanchi lived in both Padua and Rome, and it is probable that Statius knew him in one of these cities. It is more likely that he consulted Zanchi's MS in Rome, for Zanchi's stay in that city falls about the time during which Statius was preparing his edition of Catullus. Zanchi died in Rome in 1558 or 1560<sup>4</sup>.

When Basilio Zanchi went to Rome, he took with him his nephew Giampetro Maffei<sup>5</sup>. Perhaps this Maffei was related to our Achilles Maffei<sup>6</sup>. Perhaps, also, Statius knew Zanchi through Maffei, or vice versa. The following notice seems to refer to our Maffei<sup>7</sup>:

— — — card. Bernardino Maffei, nato in Roma nel 1514, ma oriondo da Verona. — — — in Roma e poi in Padova attese agli studi, come afferma Pierio Valeriano, a lui dedicando il libro XIV de' suoi Geroglifici, de' quali i due libri seguenti dedicò ad Achille e a Mario di lui fratello.

That the Achilles Maffei mentioned here was the friend of Statius, is made the more probable by the circumstance that the Pierio Valeriano of the notice was also a friend of Statius. The latter, in his notes on Catullus 80.8, speaks of an emendation to that line of Valeriano's, apparently privately communicated to Statius by Valeriano.

Another apparently undoubted reference to our Maffei is the following<sup>1</sup>:

Alterum vero observabatur Canonicorum grati animi monumentum in pariete, qui inter Reliquiarum, et S. Annae Cellam interjacebat. Hoc nimirum memoriae Paulli IV. P. M. erectum fuit, quod praeter alia multa iis collata beneficia, quae Alpharanus enumerat literis Apostolicis anni MDLIX. tertio Idus Majas, Alphonso Caraffae Card. Regenti Camerae Apostolicae demandaverat, ut Monitorio praemisso, sacris interdiceret detentores bonorum, aliarumque rerum ad Basilicam pertinentium, quas recensuit, ipsique Basilicae asseruit. Quare ad hujus beneficii memoriam, ibidem Pontifici Statua aenea, inaurata, ex alio aeneo archetypo desumpta, ut narrat Turrigius, a Canonicis collocata fuit, cum epigraphe, a Benedicto Aegio Spoletino elucubrata, juxta Antonium Caracciolum Joh. Baptistam Taphurium, et Turrigium, seu potius ab Achille Maffejo Vat. Bas. Canonico, ut refert Grimaldus.

We see then that Achilles Maffei lived in Rome, and there it was, no doubt, that Statius used his MS of Catullus. What became of his MSS in general, I have no means of knowing, though one would naturally look for them first in Rome. The identification of his Catullus depends on the readings given by Statius. The complete list follows:

- 2.6 Carum] in Maffei libro erat Rarum. quod factum opinor ex eo quod erat Karum.
- 3.10 pipillabat] In Maffei libro erat, Piplabat.
- 4.23 a mari] In Maffei libro, A mare. in alijs, Amaret.

- 10.19 Vt, prouincia quod mala incidisset] sic in Maffei libro. in alijs, Qui mala incidisset.
- 11.7 Qua] In MSS quibusdam, non Qua, sed Qui. In Maffei libro Que.
- 15.12 ubi erit foris paratum] In quod impetum facias. In Maffei quidem libro sic erat. In alijs, tibi erit foris paratum.
- 22.4 Puto esse ego illi] sic erat in Maffei libro, et in meo. in alijs, Puto ego.
- 23.12 Atqui] In duobus libris, Maffei scilicet, ac meo legebatur, Aut qui.

From 106.1 we see at once that Maffei's MS was either R or one of its descendants<sup>1</sup>. O and G have esse. The presence of 64.334-7 in Maffei's MS, the readings tum in 62.45 and esse ego in 22.4 exclude a large number of the minor MSS. The readings as a whole are remarkably good (i. e., they agree with what our best MSS have) as compared with those of most Catullus MSS. The occurrence of a number of old variants, in particular, (e. g. al' arsinoes in 66.54) suggests that the MS was an old one. On the other hand, several late readings are cited. The best explanation of this apparent contradiction is that the MS had been corrected by a later hand and that it is the late corrected readings that Statius saw. Such a MS we have in R, and in R only. Nor is it likely that another such MS ever existed. The coincidences are striking. In 4.23 R had amaret, which a late hand corrected to a mari, but in such a way that it could easily be taken for a mare, as Statius gives it. In 64.211 R had Sospitem erectum. A late hand inserted an & between the two, and changed erectum to ereptum. Statius reports Sospitem et ereptum for Maffei's MS. Moreover in 2.6, where Statius reports Rarum as the reading of Maffei liber, R has Karum, but the K is so formed, that many present-day readers would be deceived into taking it for R. (Some of the descendants of R made the same mistake and have Rarum, e. g. Ottob. 1550.) Maffei liber, then, is none other than R. Of course, there are cases in which Statius' reports from the Maffeiianus do not agree with R. We must, however, make due allowance for carelessness, incompleteness and error on Statius' part. On 44.19 Statius reports Sesti recepso; R has Sestire cepso. Statius can easily be forgiven for ignoring the word-division. On 61.158 Statius omits mention of the word fine in the margin by a late hand. On 63.18 Statius reports Hilarate, while R has Hylarate. Besides, Statius does not mention the variant al' ere citatis which is superscribed by R<sup>2</sup>. On 63.81 Veruuera is a printer's error for Verum-

uera, as has been pointed out above (p. 9). On 64.288 Statius' report of Non acuas seems to be a printer's error for Non acuos, the reading of R. R<sup>2</sup> wrote in the margin al' nonacrios, which a late hand changed to nonacrias. Possibly Statius' phrase unde factum Nonacrias refers to this variant. In 64.324 R has tutum opus and above, by the second hand, al' tu tamen opis. Statius, in reporting tutamen opis, takes the variant and ignores the word-division. Besides, his point is to show that Maffei liber had a word (opis) which was missing in the other MSS. It will be shown later that when Statius cites a line or passage from a MS, his citation can not be depended on for more than the particular word or words that caused him to go to the MS. In 64.344 R has tenen, as Statius reports, and in the margin, al' teuen by R<sup>2</sup>. Statius' phrase, Hoc extremum emendatum deinde ab eodem scriba librario, probably does not mean that tenen was corrected but that a variant (i. e. an emendation) for it was written in the margin. Emendatum is used in the same sense in the note on 25.2 (see below p. 23). That he should say that the variant is by the same hand as the text is not surprising; R and R<sup>2</sup> are very much alike, as much so as G and G<sup>2</sup>, which have in some cases<sup>1</sup> been taken as identical by modern editors. Statius, however, reports teucuri, not teuen, which R has. It is just possible that he misread R, though it is much more likely that his notes were confused, or even that he misread his own writing<sup>2</sup>. In 66.54 R has Obtulit, while Statius reports Optulit, both for Maffei's MS and the other MSS, all of which probably had Obtulit. R has elocridicos; Statius reports e locridicos, ignoring the trifling matter of word-division, as before. The variant al' arsinoes agrees, except that Statius makes it by the first hand. In 67.12 R has popl'i, whereas Statius gives popl'i. The difference is negligible. In 67.31 we meet a serious difficulty: R has se dicit hoc, while Statius reports se dicit for Maffei liber. This is exactly the reading of G. Was Maffei liber perhaps G and not R? There are a number of strong cases against G, such as 2.6, 4.23, 64.211, 64.344, 68.29, 68.46, 106.1; and not one other case where it fits the Maffeiianus better than R. Obviously G is not Maffei liber. Incidentally it may be remarked that neither O nor M can be—4.23 and 64.211 are enough to bar them. Statius' report, then, of se dicit for 67.31 must be a mistake, probably made in his own notes. In 67.42 solam is probably a misprint for sola. In 68.29, 68.46, 68.61, Statius reports uel instead of al'—a trifling difference. On 68.119 earum is possibly a misprint for carum.

<sup>2</sup> A remarkable coincidence will, I think, convince any who may hesitate to accept this explanation. Ellis, on this passage, reports teucuri as the reading of Laur. 33.12. The MS has teuen. Schwabe so reports it. I myself have seen it, and Mr. Dixon and Dr. Sage, who worked on this MS with Ellis in hand, expressly contradict him.

One MS remains to be considered, "meus," which is cited on four passages:

- 15.11 Quem tu, qua lubet, ut lubet, moueto] In MSS deerant illa uerba, Vt lubet, in meo erat, Quem tu qualubet ue moueto. Scriptum fortasse fuit, Quem tu, qualubet, ut uelis, moueto.
- 22.4 Puto esse ego illi] sic erat in Maffei libro, et in meo. in alijs, Puto ego.
- 23.12 Atqui] In duobus libris, Maffei scilicet, ac meo legebatur, Aut qui.
- 29.8 Vt albulus columbulus Dionaesus] In MSS hic uersus legitur hoc modo, Vt albulus columbus aut idoneus. itaque est in Maffei libro. In meo, Vt albulus columbus aut ydoneus.

The reading attributed to his MS in 15.11 occurs in none of the Catullus MSS known to me. The nearest approach to it is found in the fragmentary Harl. 4094, Que tu qualibet ut moueto. This is the only MS in which this reading is found<sup>1</sup>. Statius' ue is surely a corruption of ut, either in his MS or his notes. The Harleian MS can not have been his, because it contains only poems 2-17.14, 61, 62, while Statius' MS included poems 22, 23 and 29. Probably his "meus" was a close relative, now lost, of the Harleian. It may be remarked that Quem tu qualibet ut moueto (and a variant) is probably what the "Lost Verona" MS had. Professor <sup>1</sup> Vat. lat. 3269 has qualibet ut moueto and in the margin, lubet, with insertion marks over it and after ut. This MS cannot be meus liber because it has At qui in 23.12, and idoneus in 29.8. For its relation to "meus," see below, p. 25.

Hale's forthcoming publication will throw light on this. The other readings of "meus liber" are all indecisive, though they point to a good tradition.

We may digress here to discuss two statements that have been made about this MS. Fröhner<sup>1</sup> says: "seine eigene handschrift von deren rätselhaftem verschwinden aus der Vallicelliana Heyse zu berichten gut fand." Heyse's report runs as follows<sup>2</sup>: "den nunmehr verschwundenen Codex des Ach. Statius, den ich vor zwanzig Jahren auf der Vallicelliana suchte, und—nie werde ich die Entrüstung des erstaunten Bibliothekars vergessen, als wir im Schranke das vacuum fanden und der Mann mir hoch und theuer versicherte (auch das muss gesagt sein), ein deutscher Literat, dem er unlängst freie Hand liess, habe ihn weggestohlen!" This report is inaccurate. In the first place it was a Pole, not a German, who committed the thefts, as the present librarian informs me. Then again, the lost "MS" was not a MS at all, but a printed edition. Heyse's mistake arose in this manner. The written alphabetical catalogue of the Vallicelliana contains both MSS and printed works, without distinguishing them. It is only by reference to the inventory that one can tell which works are MSS and which printed texts. Under B.109 (the number of the missing "MS") the inventory contains the following: Codex chartaceus in 12. typis impressus Venetiis anno 1502 Catullus Tibullus Propertius cum notis manuscriptis Achillis Statii. Furthermore, the records of the library show that this book has been missing since 1810, and that neither Pole nor German was connected with its disappearance. Rather it was due to the wholesale plundering of the Italian libraries under Napoleon. A vast number of books and MSS were taken to Paris at that time, many of which were returned. The Vallicelliana Catullus edition was not. It was natural enough to look for it in the Bibliothèque Nationale of Paris, and there, indeed, I found it. There are two 1502 Aldines there. The one that belonged to Statius is Inv. Rés. pYc 375 (formerly Y+781). On fol. i8v the letters AS (Achilles Statius) have been erased. Below is an erasure of a whole line, beginning, apparently, with Pauca. On fol. i6v middle, AS was again erased. On the first two pages of Catullus (up to 2.4) marginal notes have been erased. A few marginal notes which have not been erased are found in poem 62. IV. (iuuenes) is added in the margins of lines 1, 11, 26, 36; PV. (puellae) is added in the margins of lines 6, 20, 32, 39. The following variants are given: 2 uix, 7 aethereos, 9 quos, 20 fertur, 32 Hespere quis nobis aequalem hanc abstulit unam, 37 quem, 45 suis est. The text repeats line 21 after line 26. This is deleted with a line. The variants for 7, 32, 37, 45 are not found in Statius' text or notes, though he quotes aetherios for line 7 from Avantius<sup>1</sup>.

An interesting fact is now disclosed about the seven MSS that Statius names. It was stated at the outset (p. 5) that the last two places in which Statius lived were Padua and Rome. All seven of the MSS which he cites by name, he probably found in one or the other of these two cities. Patauinus and Patauinus alter were of course in Padua—Patauinus is still there. Vaticanus and Marcelli Pontificis Maximi liber were and still are in Rome. It has been shown that Zanchi liber and Maffei liber were probably in Rome when Statius consulted them. Maffei liber is there now. "Meus" was in Rome while its owner was there. It is rather remarkable that four out of seven MSS should still be in the cities in which they were before 1566.

We must now consider the passages in which Statius does not name the MSS whose readings he quotes, but uses some phrase like in uno MS, in duobus MSS, in omnibus MSS. These citations far outnumber the citations from the designated MSS, as can be seen from the list that follows. The question at once arises to what MSS they refer. Perhaps the explanation that seems simplest and most natural is that he means one or two or all, as the case may be, of the MSS which he elsewhere calls by name, and that through negligence or indifference, or for some other reason, he has omitted the designations. Another possible explanation is that Statius means an entirely different group of MSS. At first glance this seems unreasonable, but if we suppose that Statius, in his unnamed citations, is copying the reports of other editors, the explanation gains some weight. A strong objection against it, however, is Statius' use of such phrases as Ita est in MSS, quibus utebar

<sup>1</sup> A copy of Statius' own edition, with unimportant MS notes probably by Statius, is now in the Vallcelliana (II. I. 171). It will be remembered that Statius was really the founder of this library.

(61.156; 63.49). An examination of the passages, and a comparison with the named MSS that have been identified, will, I think, settle the question.

Beginning with Vat. 1608, as before, I find that there are a large number of agreements with the readings quoted by Statius from some or all the MSS. On the other hand, there are also a large number of disagreements—direct contradictions. An inspection of the agreements shows that they invariably occur only when the same readings are found in many or all other MSS. In other words, they do not at all mean that Statius is quoting the Vaticanus. On the contrary, taken in connection with the great number of disagreements, they show that he is not quoting it. I give a few of the most striking disagreements.<sup>1</sup>

14.5: In MSS omnibus, Malis, pro Male. (male);
22.8: In MSS omnibus, Detecta, non Directa (directa);
22.11: in MSS omnibus, Mutat, non Nutat (nutat); 64.4:
In MSS omnibus, Puppis, non, Pubis (pubis); 64.139:
In MSS omnibus non Blanda, sed Vobis (blanda); 64.183:
In MSS omnibus non Lentos, sed, Ventos (lentos); 65.9:
Versus hic nothus, nec enim ullo est in MS (hab.); 66.83:
Omnibus in MSS non Colitis, sed uel Quamritis, uel Queritis (colitis); 68.61: In MSS omnibus non Lasso, sed Basso (lasso).

We must conclude that Statius quotes Vat. 1608 only in the one passage in which he names it.

An examination of Ottob. 1550 gives the same result. There are even more agreements, but they are never significant. Marcelli Pontificis Maximi liber, then, was used by Statius only in the one place where he calls it by name.

A comparison of the readings of the existing Paduan MS with Statius' unnamed quotations, leads to quite a different conclusion. It is clear that he often used the Patauinus without naming it. In the complete list of passages in which Statius refers to MSS, (see p. 27), I give, after each citation, the reading of the MS now in Padua, so that it may be seen to what extent Statius used it. I give here a few striking cases.

The list scarcely needs comment. The already certain identification of Statius' Patauinus, made from the passages in which he names it, is clinched by double certainty from the passages in which he does not name it.

We may pause to ask ourselves why the Patauinus is included in the unassigned citations of Statius, while the Vaticanus and Marcelli liber are not. The answer is easy: the Vaticanus is cited by name practically once only—for two successive lines in one note.

Marcelli liber is named once only. Probably Statius consulted these MSS on just one occasion, and noted the readings for but a single passage in each; or perhaps someone looked at these places for Statius. The Patauinus, on the contrary, is cited by name a number of times throughout the book. Evidently Statius had copious notes of its readings. Statius himself seems to distinguish Marcelli liber from his regular MSS, for he says: Sic etiam erat in MSS ijs, quos habebam. In Marcelli Pont. Maximi libro fuerat, Munere. The contrast between the MSS which he "had" and Marcellus' MS must be intentional.<sup>1</sup>

We have seen that Zanchi liber is named by Statius in only three cases—all close together near the end of the book, 104.4, 115.2, 115.4. It seems likely that it is in a class with the Vaticanus and Marcelli liber, and that it was not used by Statius except in the three places just given.<sup>2</sup>

We come now to Maffei liber and R. Maffei liber is named by Statius more often than any other MS. It seems likely, then, that it is to be classed with the Patauinus, i. e., that it is one of the MSS in Statius' "omnibus" collection. It must be remembered that R is the ancestor of most of the existing MSS of Catullus; that, therefore, very few, or rather no, readings would be found in it that do not appear in many of its descendants. The criterion which enabled us to identify Maffei liber as R, namely the striking combination of old and new readings (the latter due to a late corrector in R), does not help us here, for we cannot be sure that the unus manuscriptus which has an old reading in one place, is the same unus manuscriptus that has a new reading in another. There are many cases where Statius' report from one or more MSS agrees with R, either corrected or uncorrected. This can be seen from the complete list that follows, where I have given, after each citation, R's readings as well as those of the Paduan MS. Of really notable agreements, there is only one. On 62.8 Statius says, Sic certe] In MS uno tres litterae uidentur erasae post haec uerba. suspicor autem fuisse, Est. In both G and R there is an erasure of si after certe. No other MS has an erasure in this place, and it is not likely that another MS ever existed that did have.<sup>3</sup> Since we have already identified Maffei liber as R, and since it seems likely that Statius quotes R without naming it, just as he quotes the Patauinus, and since, finally, there is no real evidence that Statius used G, but much evidence against it, the conclusion is necessary that in his note to 62.8, Statius refers to R. At this point may be mentioned Statius' note on 25.2, where he says: — — — In MSS omnibus erat, — — — moricula. Et emendatum in nonnullis Moricilla. The word emendatum does not refer to a correction, but to a variant, exactly as in the note to 64.344 (see above, p. 16). He probably is quoting from R, which has moricula in the text and al' moricilla in the margin. Statius' note on 29.20 is also worth noting here. In MSS, Hunc Galliae timet, et Britanniae. Sed sic tamen, ut inter uerbum Timet, et id quod sequitur, paululum quid desit. Itaque acute Faernus legendum coniciebat, Hunc Galliae timetis, et Britanniae. R has an unusually large space after Timet, and probably it is this that Statius means by his phrase paululum quid desit.

A more difficult question is whether the two lost MSS, the Patauinus alter and Statius' own MS, are cited in the unnamed quotations. The readings for which Statius names these MSS are fairly well scattered—especially in the case of the Patauinus alter. They seem, then, to belong to the inner circle of Statius' MSS. We may assume on a priori grounds that Statius often quotes his own MS. To decide the question, one must know something of the nature of the two lost MSS.

Statius says that the Patauinus alter had QVIN in 1.1. No MS known to me has this reading—all have Cui, Quoi or Qui, except Bononiensis 2744, which has Quui. The thought at once suggests itself that Quin is a corruption of Quui. In 45.14 both Patauini, and therefore Patauinus alter, had the not uncommon reading uno. This is found also in Bonon. 2744. The peculiar reading of the Patauinus alter in 45.8-9 does not fit the Bologna MS, so that the former cannot be identical with the latter. Judging from 1.1, it seems likely that the Patauinus alter was a copy of the Bononiensis. A comparison of the latter's readings with some of the more peculiar readings in Statius' unnamed quotations shows, in fact, a very close relationship between the lost Paduan MS and the existing Bologna MS. I give a selected list of readings from the lost MS. This list is based on more or less striking agreements of Statius' unnamed reports with the Bononiensis. It is to be assumed that the readings given are also those of the Bologna MS, unless a special statement is made to the contrary. I include, too, the readings which Statius specifically assigns to the Patauinus alter.

The Bologna MS ends with 88.6 at the end of a quinio. Probably it was once complete.

It has been seen above (p. 17) that meus liber was probably closely connected with Harl. 4094 and Vat. 3269. Here again, as in the case of the Bologna MS, we find striking agreements between these two MSS on the one hand, and some of Statius' peculiar reports on the other. Vat. 3269, being more "interpolated", shows less similarity than Harl. 4094, but the latter is a mere fragment. The explanation of this agreement is that Statius is quoting from his own MS—a close relative of the Vatican and Harleian MSS. The following list, made up of the agreements of the Vatican and Harleian MSS with some of the more idiosyncratic reports of Statius, gives us an idea of the nature of the lost "meus". It is to be understood that, unless otherwise stated, the readings are also those of the Harleian MS for the poems that are contained in it (2.1-17.14,61,62), and where it fails, those of the Vatican MS. The latter is used very sparingly. I include also the readings which Statius expressly attributes to his MS.

Such other peculiar readings as occur in Statius' reports must be assigned either to Patauinus alter or to "meus." We see, then, that four MSS only formed the basis of Statius' critical apparatus, while from three others he excerpted only single passages. This conclusion is confirmed by his statement on 66.7 (see above, p. 22), and by his frequent reference to only three or four MSS (so on 1.1, 68.126, 68.147, 61.171, 66.54)—never more.

I now give the complete list of Statius' quotations from the MSS. After each passage, I give the readings of the Paduan MS and of R. Where one or both agree with Statius' report, I print merely Pat. or R or both. If there are any differences I note them. When a correction has been made in R by R<sup>1</sup> or R<sup>2</sup> so well that Statius would not be likely to have deciphered the original reading, I give only the corrected reading, stating, however, that it is by R<sup>1</sup> or R<sup>2</sup>, as the case may be. A number of late hands (of the end of the fifteenth or the beginning of the sixteenth century) I have grouped under the general term of R<sup>r</sup>. It is not essential for the present purpose to distinguish them. Small matters of spelling are generally ignored. Corrections by the first hand in the Paduan MS are generally not noted, only the corrected reading being given. In general, only such things have been noted as would be of interest in connection with Statius' reports. A thorough apparatus is not intended.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup>I have aimed to preserve Statius' spelling and punctuation. His common phrases in manuscriptis omnibus, omnibus in manuscriptis, I have abbreviated i. m. o., o. i. m. In the apparatus for Pat. and R, i. m. = in margine, lect. = lectionem or lectio, etc.

<sup>1</sup> This alleged theft was committed by no less a man than Muretus, who prints the reading, as his own, in his edition of Catullus (1554, etc.). It may be remarked here that Statius never mentions Muretus by name. Hand and Heyne both wondered at Statius' silence in regard to Muretus. The former says (Praefatio, in Valpy's Catullus, London, 1822, p. 9): Causam, quapropter Mureti mentio nusquam ab eo facta est, equidem non intellexi. The latter comments as follows (Albi Tibulli Carmina, ed. 4, 1817, p. XVII): Sequitur ille est Aldinum secundum, Mureti quod saepe miratus sum, via verbo mentione facta: ut tamen nec eum convicto vel obtreptione uellere uideri possit. Fertur tamen, cum Italiam adisset, cum Mureto uisasse, neque adeo eius de Tibullo merita ignorare potuit. Evidently the two had quarreled. See my note on 64.96.

It is now time to discuss fully a question which has been touched on before,<sup>1</sup>—the accuracy of the reports as we find them. No doubt a number of strange readings are mere misprints. I give a few examples of apparently certain printer's errors:

22.5 Nac for Nec. 61.196 iuuenum for iuuenem. 63.5 Illetus for Illetas (so just below), and Lactus for Lactes (or else Lactes for Lactus just below). 63.81 Veruuera for Verumuera. 64.139 Vobis for Nobis. 64.151 Deesse for Deessem. 64.230 Ithonij for Ithomi. 66.18 inuerunt for iuuerunt. 66.54 equus for equos. 66.93 Vt for V̄t. 67.12 fecit for facit. 80.8 Illa for Illo (probably for illo; it is certain that there is a misprint).

Another and far more fertile source of wrong reports is error of some kind on Statius' part. His notes may have become confused: this would be especially easy if he entered the readings of the MSS in the margin of a printed copy. In doing so he may sometimes have left out the name of the MS whose readings he was noting. One may perhaps be able to see a change in his method: in his earlier work he was more prone to leave out the name of the MS than in his later work. This would account for the fact that the Patauini are mentioned by name less often than Maffei liber, though the first Patauinus, at least, seems to have been excerpted more fully than Maffei liber. The Patauini he probably collated in Padua, before going to Rome. Maffei liber he is not likely to have seen before reaching Rome (see above p. 11). Occasionally Statius may have misread his own writing, and frequently, no doubt, he misread the MSS.

Confident that the identification of his MSS is correct, we may now point out a few certain cases of error, most of them, no doubt, made by Statius himself, though some of them may be mere misprints.

There are two very insidious kinds of inaccuracy in Statius' reports that must not be overlooked. The first is that in MSS omnibus does not always mean in all four, or even in three, of the regular MSS. His own words convict him. On 61.103 he says: In MSS omnibus Procatur pia persequens. rectius illud, si modo ueterem librum Guarinus est secutus. Then follow quotations from Statius and Plautus, and finally, evidently as an afterthought, Erat quodam in libro Precatur pia persequens—the reading of the Paduan MS. No doubt in many cases Statius did not have an afterthought and left his statements inexact. Not rarely he says that a reading is found in MSS omnibus when surely it occurs only in one. So on 11.11 his report, In MSS omnibus est, Horribilesque ultimosque Britannos, applies only to his own MS. A factor in causing this inaccuracy may have been the absence of full reports on all the MSS. In this connection there is a point to be noted. It seems probable that the phrase in MSS is not equivalent to in MSS omnibus, but rather to in aliis MSS. So on 5.8, where the reading Dein mille altera, deinde secunda centum is said to be in MSS. Even then the expression in MSS is inexact, for that reading surely was only in his own MS. The report on 64.145 is exactly parallel. A similarly loose use of the term in MSS omnibus is its application to a passage, when only one or two words in the passage are meant to be taken as having the given reading. This very frequent inaccuracy is due to Statius' being interested only in the one or two words, while the rest he adds for the connection, without consulting the MSS. Here again, Statius' own words prove the case. On 64.13 he says: Totaque remigio spumis incanduit unda] Sic est omnibus in MSS. probior tamen lectio Tortaque. Sic Vergilius ——— et Ovidius ———. Pro Incanuit autem est omnibus in libris, Incanduit. It is easy to infer that Statius does not always add such a conscientious afterthought as the foregoing. Examples are 64.212, where the MSS have moenico, 67.27, where they have querendus (Statius here is interested only in the MS reading unde for aliunde of the text). 17.1 is an aggravated case. Probably none of his MSS had O colonia quae, while for the following word, they were divided between cupis and cuspis. The word Statius is concerned with here is ledere.

One thing more is of interest—Statius' judgment about his MSS. In his day, all MSS were regarded as of about equal value. He, too, makes no attempt to put one above another, though he does hint at a preference for the older MSS. On 64.80 he says: in duobus paullo uetustioribus libris pro Vexarentur, Versarentur. The former was the reading of R and probably of his own MS, the latter, of the two Paduan MSS. He thus makes the Paduan MSS older than R (the existing Paduan MS was probably written after 1450, and the other, to judge by the citations, not much, if at all, earlier).

In summarizing, we see that Statius used no MSS of Catullus that we do not know, except three which are of no value for the text; that further, he did not realize the superiority of the one good MS which he used; and finally that his citations are often inaccurate, misleading or entirely wrong,—though, in this respect, he perhaps is better than his contemporaries, and not much worse than many editors of more recent days.
